

What products can I bring?

As of April 1, 2010, you can bring back even more of your unwanted electronics, like:

- Amplifiers
- Audio and video players
- Cameras
- Cell phones
- Computers and peripherals
- Copiers
- Digital cameras
- Fax machines
- Monitors
- Pagers and PDAs
- Printers
- Radios
- Receivers
- Scanners
- Speakers
- Telephones and answering machines
- Tuners
- Turntables
- Televisions
- Video projectors

For information about collection locations, products, and frequently asked questions, visit dowhatyoucan.ca/Electronics.

Ontario Electronic Stewardship is the industry organization responsible for developing and implementing the Do What You Can electronics program according to the Waste Diversion Act, 2002.

The program was developed with Waste Diversion Ontario on behalf of the Ontario government.

To contact OES:

info@ontarioelectronicstewardship.ca

Recycle your electronics.

dowhatyoucan.ca

Recycle your electronics.

Recycling electronics just got easier.

The Do What You Can electronics program has set up a network of more than 500 collection points across the province where Ontarians can bring their used, broken or unwanted electronic equipment for responsible reuse and recycling.

The reason is a simple one – to do a better job of keeping waste electronic equipment out of landfill. All we ask is that you Do What You Can.

Where do I take them?

Right now you can bring your used electronics to a variety of municipal, not-for-profit, retail and other types of depots and special event days. Ontario Electronic Stewardship (OES), the not-for-profit organization charged with implementing this program, is working hard to set up more collection locations in your area. From there, these items will either be reused or recycled in an environmentally responsible way.

To find a drop-off location near you, go to dowhatyoucan.ca and choose Electronics.

Who is funding this program?

The Do What You Can electronics program is funded by fees paid to OES by manufacturers and importers of electronics in Ontario (called Stewards). These funds are used exclusively to pay for collection, transportation, consolidation, and processing of waste electronics as well as research and consumer education programs to encourage greater electronic equipment recycling.

In some cases, Stewards absorb the fees they pay to OES. In others, Stewards may choose to reflect these costs at the point of purchase. The fees are used exclusively to promote and support the safe and responsible reuse and recycling of electronic waste in the province. None of the funds go to government.

About dowhatyoucan.ca

dowhatyoucan.ca was created specifically to help you find collection sites for different types of household waste. You can find collection sites by community, by postal code, and even by material type. One section of the site deals with home and business electronics while the other deals with household hazardous or special waste.